3. JRC Annual Event on the Scientific Support to the Danube Strategy

JRC Annual Event on the Scientific Support to the Danube Strategy

© EU, 2015

The JRC Annual Event 2015 in Ulm will take stock of the continuing scientific support activities for the Danube region and will focus on the JRC expertise that supports the European Commission priorities of boosting jobs and growth, building a European Energy Union and supporting the digital single market through smart specialisation in the Danube region.

The purpose of the event in Ulm is to show how the excellence and relevance of the research and support activities executed by JRC in cooperation with its partners from the Danube macro-region can impact scientific, economic, social and environmental development. The event will focus on how research and innovation can create jobs, underline the relationship between businesses and universities, and open the door for cross-border cooperation opportunities.

The event includes four parallel technical workshops on 27 October allowing for interactive discussions between scientists and policy makers on the following subjects:

1. Energy workshop
2. Water workshop
3. Smart Specialisation in the ICT sector
4. Danube Innovation Partnership: instruments fostering scientific exchange

The presentation of the "Danubius Awards" will take place on 27 October starting at 19:30. This award is complemented by the "Danubius Young Scientist Award" which will be granted to 14 young scientists - one from each country that is part of the EU Strategy for the Danube Region.

A high-level panel session on 28 October will discuss what is needed to further reinforce collaboration in the Danube macro-region.

The conference will represent the opportunity to take a closer look at the complex mechanisms that should be put together on a political, project and funding level in order to profit largely from the potential of a macro-regional strategy.

The UASVMCN is a Life Science University, founded in 1869 as the Higher School of Agriculture in Cluj. In 1929, the Higher School became the Academy of High Agronomic Studies of Cluj and since 1948, it functioned as the Agronomic Institute of Cluj. Starting only with the Faculty of Agriculture, in 1959 the Faculty of Animal Science was created, followed in 1962 by the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine and by the Faculty of Horticulture in 1977. The Agronomic Institute changed its name in 1991 and became the University of Agricultural Sciences and Veterinary Medicine Cluj-Napoca. From 2000 the university is member of the Union of Cluj-Napoca Universities and member of the Romanian Consortia of Life Science Universities. Since 2012, a new Faculty of Food Science and Technology was founded. Recently, UASVMCN was ranked in the "top 12 best Romanian research universities", being awarded for the research activity and the successful activity with European projects funds.
